Port Arthur residents can browse a lineup of local small businesses at the Mid-County Farmers & Crafters Market on Saturday, Nov. 14. Central Mall lists the event for 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and advertises more than 40 local small-business vendors.

The market is scheduled indoors at Central Mall, between TJ Maxx and Target. The mall's address is 3100 Highway 365, Port Arthur, TX 77642. An indoor setting gives shoppers a place to explore the event without relying on an outdoor venue, while the five-hour schedule leaves room to stop in at a convenient time.

For anyone hoping to discover independent sellers, the advertised vendor count makes the market a chance to browse a range of small businesses in one trip. But the event listing does not identify the participating vendors or specify what they will sell. It also does not state admission costs or confirm individual vendor availability. Shoppers looking for a particular product—or wanting to know whether entry is free—should check Central Mall's official event listing for updates before heading out rather than assume those details.

The mall says the event was formerly known as the Nederland Farmers & Artisans Market. Its listing also gives Dec. 12 as another upcoming market date, offering a later opportunity for people who cannot make the November gathering. Details may change, so consult the organizer's current listing when planning.

The event is presented as a way to find local small-business vendors, not as a profile of any one seller. With no published roster in the listing, visitors can arrive ready to browse without relying on claims about specific makers, products, or special offers.
